Instructions for using Interactive Visual Books

- * Print and laminate the pages. I prefer to print on white cardstock when possible because the book will be more sturdy.
- * Cut each page in half (except for the last page...keep that page full size).
- * Place velcro in each box and on top of each picture on the grid on the last page.
- * Bind the book on the left (or use rings to hold together).
- * Cut out the other set of the small pictures, add velcro and match to the pictures on the last page.

TIPS FOR USE: While reading the story, students are able to become more engaged with the story by matching pictures to the correct page. For some students, it is helpful to teach this directly, one on one, before introducing it in the group setting. Some children will begin with requiring a full hand over hand prompt, some will need a physical prompt (tapping on the correct picture or placing it in their hand and allowing them to put it on the page.) For our students who don't process verbal language very well, this activity allows them to process things visually. Visual supports are an evidence based practice in the area of autism spectrum disorders.
